The website uses cookies to store certain information about you. The use of cookies can be disabled, but this is not recommended. To use the website at its best, we recommend allowing the use of cookies.

The use of Google Remarketing allows us to show personal advertisements based on your interest as opposed to random ads. You will only see these ads on Google or a Google partner website. To do this Google uses both direct and indirect cookies (like the Google Analytics cookie)

Our website also uses Twitter and Facebook tracking pixels in order to measure the success of our advertising campaigns and to enable remarketing on different platforms.

This means both Twitter and Facebook will collect information about the user and their visit. You can find more information here:
